

FACT SHEET

PINWORM

(Enterobius Vermicularis)

What are Pinworms?	Pinworms are a common parasitic worm that cause itching and irritation in the peri-anal area (the area around the anus).
How is it spread?	<ul style="list-style-type: none"> • Pinworms are spread when infective eggs are swallowed, either directly by scratching and transferring eggs from anus to mouth or indirectly by clothing, bedding, food or other articles contaminated with eggs. • Eggs are resistant to disinfectants and can stay alive in the environment for 13 days. • Adult worms die after laying eggs, so reinfection (either auto infection or reinfection from others) is necessary to maintain a pinworm infection.
What is the incubation period?	It takes about 2-6 weeks after contact for signs of infestation to appear.
What are the early signs?	Pinworm infection causes itching in the anal area; there may also be disturbed sleep, irritability, and local irritation due to scratching. In some cases, there are no apparent symptoms.
What about contacts?	Encourage extra care with handwashing, especially after using the bathroom and before eating.
How long is the person contagious?	Pinworms can be transmitted as long as the female worm survives in the intestine (usually about two weeks). Children can easily reinfect themselves and it is not uncommon for other household members to become infected.
When is it OK to return to daycare/school?	Children do not usually need to be excluded for pinworm infections.
Other Important Information	<ul style="list-style-type: none"> • Parents should keep children's nails short and discourage children scratching the anal area or nail biting. • If the infection is extensive, treatment may need to be repeated in two weeks. • Clean & vacuum house for several days after treatment of cases. Wash all bedding, linens, underclothing, and recently-worn clothes.
